Assoc. Prof. Dr. Ahmad Ramzi Yusoff
Universiti Teknologi MARA (UiTM)

I am a qualified general and hepato-pancreato-biliary surgeon from Malaysia. I obtained my primary medical qualification in 2002 and pursued specialist general surgical training in Malaysia for four years. Upon completion, I was awarded a Master in Surgery and conferred membership from the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland (IMRCS) at the same time.

In 2010, I worked as a Consultant Surgeon in a university hospital (Universiti Teknologi MARA) and a local hospital (Sg. Buloh Hospital) that mostly managed general surgical emergencies and traumas, and digestive diseases. In 2012, I took up a Clinical Fellow post in Minimally Invasive General Surgery at the National University Hospital, Singapore, for eight months on a sabbatical.

In 2013, I pursued my subspecialty training in the hepato-pancreato-biliary (HPB) unit in Selayang Hospital, Malaysia, the national HPB referral centre, where I gained experience in benign, malignant, and complex HPB cases. I completed my Honorary Clinical Fellowship in the liver transplant unit at the Institute of Liver Studies, King's College Hospital, London, the United Kingdom, under the supervision of Professor Nigel Heaton in 2017.

I am currently an Associate Professor and Head of the Department of Surgery, Universiti Teknologi MARA, and a visiting Consultant Hepatobiliary and Liver Transplant Surgery in Selayang Hospital, Malaysia.
